Metro board approves APD handling, housing

The board of governors of the Metro Intelligence Unit decided Thursday afternoon the City of Amarillo will remain as grantee and the unit will continue to be housed in that city's police department, but control of the unit by City Manager John Stiff will be curtailed.

Board action Thursday was based on action earlier in the day by officials from the five governmental bodies which support the Metro Unit, action which left it to the board to decide who would be grantee under a new funding program and where the unit would reside.

The board met in special session following a luncheon meeting of officials from Randall and Potter and Deaf Smith counties and Amarillo and Canyon during which the goals of the controversial Metro squad were altered.

Canyon Police Lt. Tom Rolan said Friday the board of governors, which consists of himself, APD Chief Paul Hulsey, Randall County Sheriff Cliff Longest and Potter County Sheriff T. L. Baker, approved a grant request for Criminal Justice Council funds totalling more than $70,000 with Amarillo as grantee and APD as unit housing.

But, he said, they also passed several resolutions restricting the decision-making authority of Amarillo manager Stiff in relation to the Metro unit's operation.

In a specific move, the board wrote a letter that afternoon to Stiff advising him to return to Metro members their vehicles for full-time use.

Rolan said someone in the Amarillo city hierarchy decided months ago that vehicle use by Metro members would be restricted.

The grant drawn up by the city and county officials who met earlier Thursday, Rolan says.

It establishes the Metro unit for a one-year funding period as exclusively an intelligence-gathering squad of limited membership.

APD's involvement in the unit will be cut from the current 6 men to only 3 men.

Rolan said the unit will not be a task unit. It will not make arrests or busts, but will gather information to be passed onto the police units which have jurisdiction for their own arrest and booking action.

Members of the boards of the five governmental areas at noon Thursday informally agreed they want to see the Metro squad continued but under a different format.

They agreed Metro should limit its operations to intelligence gathering.

In the past, Sheriff Longest told the noon luncheon, the squad has operated as the APD's vice squad. He said when the elite unit was formed three years ago, APD did away with its vice squad and the Metro unit was forced to work minor crimes.

Election decision due Monday for council

Canyon city commissioners will either accept or reject Monday night petitions calling for a vote by the electorate on construction of a new $1.2 million city hall complex.

City Attorney Elton Cox has indicated the petitions do not meet the legal qualifications set out in the city's home rule charter.

But, commissioners' inclinations on the issue were unknown at week's end.

Commissioners have already received copies of the petitions, which contained 317 signatures. An affidavit required to accompany the petitions was presented city clerk Bob Moore last week fulfilling the last requirement for formal filing of the documents with the city.

If commissioners decide to call an election to decide whether or not to build the city hall complex, the election must be held within 30 days.

The petitions, circulated by a handful of citizens two to three weeks ago, have been declared by Moore to contain more than the required number of signatures. A total of more than 200 signatures were validated by Moore.

For more than a year, city commissioners have been working with a Dallas architectural firm to plan construction of the complex.

The construction will be funded through $500,000 in federal revenue sharing money, about $500,000 in fund surpluses from city coffers and a short-term indebtedness program.

The new complex, for which plans have already been completed to the construction design phase, will include general offices, city commission chambers, areas for the police department and a large fire department — all under one roof. The building is to be located across from the current community center on 16th Street.

Petitioners declare that the spending of more than $1 million for the project should be an issue decided by the voters and not commissioners.

They call for commissioners to cease construction plans and allow local residents to vote on the issue.

The last time a citizens' effort to call a vote on a similar issue was in 1969 when commissioners proposed to place concrete medians down 23rd Street for traffic control.

Citizens' efforts called a vote on the issue and the measure was defeated at the polls.

With city elections only 20 days away, the civic center complex has emerged as the only real issue facing the voters on April 2.

Mrs. C. S. Thompson, who is running on the city ballot against incumbent Jim Christopher, has made the complex construction her campaign issue. The other challenger, Charles Sykes, has yet to make a public statement on the complex construction.

Sykes is running against incumbent H. R. Fulton Jr.

Besides the civic center issue, commissioners face a heavy agenda Monday night. They will meet at 7 p.m. in the community center to discuss an ordinance calling for an assessment program for street paving, an agreement with the Texas Highway Department on construction of a grade separation at 15th Street and U.S. 60, and a request

Regents okay computer system, voice disapproval of new laws

West Texas State University regents Saturday approved the purchase of a million dollar computer system and indicated disfavor with two Texas legislators' reform bills requiring financial disclosures and record disclosures by the Regents and the University.

The regents deferred action on purchase of a new DEC-10 computer system for almost two hours Saturday as they awaited an opinion from the University's legal counsel on the provisions of the purchase agreement.

The opinion was rendered shortly before noon by Miss Karen Johnson, legal counsel, and regents okayed expenditure of $160,000 per year for seven years to finance the basic equipment.

They also approved the purchase of $159,000 for peripheral equipment for the system's installation.

Durwood Henderson, director of the WTSU computer center, said the new system will far outstretch the current computer system in capability to serve various regional agencies, such as Randall County, on a time-share basis.

In connection with approval of the computer purchase the regents executed an agreement with the Region 16 Education

Service Center for continued time-share use of the new computer at a cost of $84,000 per year to ESC.

Regents expressed concern during the meeting about a recently passed Texas statute which opens many university records for public inspection.

In adopting charges for records requested by the public for perusal they expressed disfavor for the act but did not act on a suggestion by Regent Donald Curry that the board adopt a general policy expressing their concern with the application of specific portions of the legislation.

Regents also expressed their disfavor for another piece of reform legislation which has been said requires them as individuals to file public statements on the financial worth.

Regent Curry asked the University to seek an attorney general's opinion on whether the act specifically includes financial disclosure by regents. Under the act, the regents must disclose their financial statements by April 26.

Curry warned that there "may be (some regents) forced to resign if their financial records are to be scrutinized in this manner."

Board chairman Cloyce Box warned of the same eventuality.

In other business, regents approved

Fed red tape unwinds for city

After more than five years of waiting, federal red tape has unwound and city officials learned last week they will receive a $42,000 reimbursement from the government for construction costs of the city's sewer plant.

City Manager George Louder said he was informed Thursday by federal officials that the city will receive an initial check for $21,000 from the federal Environmental Protection Agency. Another check for a like amount will also arrive.

The $42,000 will represent about 20 per cent of the total cost of the $193,000 sewage treatment plant which was constructed in 1969 at the eastern edge of the city.

Already, the federal government has picked up the tab on about 32 per cent of the cost of the plant, which daily handles about a million gallons of sewage.

When city officials began planning for construction of a new waste water treatment facility here, an act of Congress allowed federal participation in the project to total about 30 per cent.

Later, however, Congress legislated that the per cent of participation could be as much as 55 per cent, Louder said.

While Canyon was given federal funds for financing about 30 per cent of the construction costs, the federal agencies involved ruled before 1970 that Texas cities were not eligible for funding under the law which allowed for 55 per cent federal involvement.

Louder said the federal position at that time was based on contentions that Texas had not passed strict waste water disposal legislation.

"From what I understand, several congressmen from all over challenged that position

Plans resumed on new annex

Randall County commissioners will resume full plans for construction of a $300,000 south Amarillo courthouse annex based on positive opinions issued Thursday by Dist. Atty. George Dowlen concerning the legality of expenditure of that amount.

Dowlen, who prior to last Monday had been skeptical the county had legal authority to fund a $300,000 complex, agreed Thursday with bond attorneys in Dallas that the expenditure is legal under Texas law.

Dowlen talked telephonically Monday with representatives of Dumas, Huguinin, Boothman and Moorover of Dallas, bond attorneys handling the financing through Columbian Securities Corporation, after an Amarillo television station charged that Texas statutes prohibited construction of an annex costing more than $200,000.

The attorneys sent Dowlen copies of Texas attorney general opinions for his perusal and based on those opinions and a 20-year-old state court case, Dowlen told County Judge Woody Pond the commissioners may proceed with plans for construction without fear of impediment.

The television station had contended that Article 1605a of Vernon's Annotated Texas Civil Statutes prohibited expenditure of more than $200,000 for construction of an annex.

Dowlen and the Dallas attorneys contend that based on the attorney general's opinions and the court case, Dancy v. Davidson, the expenditure is legal.

"The really significant thing in there is one case, Dancy case, in which the Court of Civil Appeals in San Antonio, indicated that a commissioners court can provide an annex under the terms of Article 2351 without necessarily relying on Article 1605a," Dowlen said.

Dowlen said Article 1605a refers only to buildings financed through the issuance of bonds. Article 2351 stands alone and is not amended or made pursuant to Article 1605a, he said.

County Judge Woody Pond indicated Thursday the commissioners, who stalled any further action on construction of the annex, will now proceed without delay to complete plans for the annex so construction may begin.

"I believe we'll go ahead with it

Annexation is sought on Hunsley Hills land

Annexation by the city of more than half a section of land north of the current Hunsley Hills addition in north Canyon has been asked for by Developer A. W. Lair.

In a letter to City Manager George Louder, Lair seeks city annexation of all land within a section which lies between U.S. 87 and the VFW Road and between Hunsley Road and the Palo Duro Creek bed.

Currently, Hunsley

Hills addition from U.S. 60 north to the Palo Duro Creek has been annexed into the city limits of Canyon.

The additional about 400 acres would bring into the city one of two sections Lair purchased last fall from developer Arch Hunsley.

Along with his request for annexation, Lair submitted a plat which indicates more than 600 lots for houses are planned for development in the section of land for which annexation is sought.

Since Lair purchased the Hunsley addition, more than a dozen new homes have been constructed in the area.

City commissioners will consider the annexation petition at their meeting Monday night.

Louder said several public notices of the annexation effort must be published before the annexation can be ac-

As retirement nears, woman wants answer

Mrs. Marguerite Strain had planned to retire last May after serving the citizens of Canyon for 28 years.

Whether because of federal indecisiveness or recalcitrance, Mrs. Strain will see her 29th anniversary of employment with the City of Canyon on this May. She doesn't want to be in city hall to see her 30th anniversary.

Mrs. Strain, who handles the city's bookkeeping, began a personal campaign more than a year and a half ago to have federal officials either state that the Texas Municipal Retirement System is unlawfully discriminating against women or that it is not. For a year and a half, she's waited in vain for a federal decision.

In August, 1972, Mrs. Strain told The News she believed the TMRS retirement system for employees of Texas cities discriminated against women based on their tables of benefits. She still believes the TMRS is discriminatory. Officials of the system deny the system discriminates.

A table of percentages for estimating standard benefit retirement allowances, shows a definite five-year difference and advantage for men employees.

Mrs. Strain charges, and the tables bear out, that women must work five years longer than men to receive equal benefits. Or, they may retire at the same age as a man after an equal amount of service and receive lower benefits than would the man.

Working along two different paths, Mrs. Strain and her boss, City Manager George Louder, have striven to find out what federal feeling is on the TMRS policies. The status of each inquiry is in question.

And, Mrs. Strain is almost at the end of her rope. She'll turn 65 in October and put in her 29th year of service to the city

Our World

Sin, Like Change A Constant

By ANN BROWN

The highest goal of modern man seems to be social security. Is security possible in a world where the only constant is change?

The living centenarian has observed more changes than any man in history. The greatest change he has seen, however, has not been from the ox cart to jet propulsion, but in the concept of sin.

The Creator did not leave man without a criterion for conduct; He spelled it out in plain and simple language.

First of all, God asked man to love his Creator. That love was to be expressed through obedience. Man was commanded to reverence God's name, and the day set apart for rest and worship. He was to honor his parents, and respect the property and person of his fellow man.

Not to do so was sin.

Now it is considered sophisticated and intellectual to deny the very existence of the Creator. (If even a toothpick must have a designer, how did this complicated universe evolve without one?)

God's name, instead of being revered, is used as a swear word — not just in private or in bars, but in public, in print, and on the stage and screen.

God's day, instead of being used for rest and worship, is a day of frenzied activity; worship is ignored, and the most evil pursuits flourish. Parents are anathema; character assassination, murder, and robbery are most popular in Washington D.C., but prevalent nationwide.

But who is to say what is evil? God was the first and shall be the last judge of what is evil. He repeated the list many times for our edification. An explicit list is found in I. Cor. 6:9-10.

The prohibited conduct began with fornication; it included idolaters, adulterers, effeminate, homosexuals, thieves, drunkards, and extortioners.

Today, fornication is "art" to be exhibited on stage and screen. Adultery is a legal technicality, a matter of life style, or at worst an indiscretion to be forgiven and forgotten.

Long hair and effeminate attire is the latest style for males. Homosexuality is merely "marching to a different drummer," a simple matter of choice.

Murderers are social misfits who need rehabilitation. Thieves are economically deprived unfortunates. Drunkards are sick. Extortioners are social rebels or reformers.

But all of life revolves around the conflict between good and evil. Even professional wrestling must be a conflict between the "good guys and the bad guys" or it does not draw a crowd.

If murder, theft, drunkenness, adultery, and homosexuality are not sin, what is?

The social-gospel preachers have the answer: The sinners are the hard-working, law-abiding citizens who pay their own bills, and solve their own problems.

Being self-sustaining is not enough; in failing to eliminate poverty for ALL people, the productive citizens have condemned their less fortunate neighbors to drunkenness, drug addiction, and debauchery.

The only sins more heinous than being law-abiding and self-supporting seem to be that of loving one's own country more than others, enjoying a homogenous neighborhood.

The sinner is the "square" who works for his livelihood. If he were "hip" he would "rip it off" his neighbors.

Mickey Cohen, the notorious gangster, says the trouble with modern man is that he has lost his sense of shame, pride, and self respect.

With no sense of shame, it is impossible to have pride or self respect.

The first mention of shame in the Bible is in the story of Adam and Eve. When they realized they were naked, they hid themselves.

From that point on in recorded Scripture, man was clothed (if he was in his right mind), and nakedness was equated with insanity, shame, or spiritual destitution (Rev. 3:18, 16:15).

The young people who are flaunting their nakedness are obviously without shame and are spiritually destitute. Perhaps they are also a little insane.

The fact that so many adults find the naked youngsters amusing is simply another illustration of the change in the concept of sin.

Violation of our Creator's prohibitions are not wrong because He prohibited them; He prohibited conduct that was detrimental to man for man's own good.

Our concepts, environment, and way of life change constantly. But human nature does not change, and God does not change.

Sin has not changed since God spelled out the rules in Exodus. The penalty also remains the same (Rom. 6:23).

Why 'Aginners' Are Winners

By CARROLL WILSON

Canyon city commissioners will probably call a special election on the city hall complex issue during their Monday night meeting.

The commissioners are caught in a bind.

They know if they call a special election to give the electorate a chance to vote on whether the people themselves want to spend $1.2 million for construction of the complex, the measure will almost surely be defeated.

Historically, few of the qualified registered voters in Canyon come out to the polls on election day when the election is to decide commissioners' races.

And, historically, few registered voters come out when any other local issue is involved in an election.

It is rare for 1000 voters to participate in a commissioner election.

Five years ago, commissioners decided to call a special election to let the voters decide whether concrete medians and left-turn lanes should be placed along 23rd Street.

Debate among a few townspeople was hot and Mayor Paul Lindsey was even harassed by phone and threatened with bodily harm before that election occurred.

Nevertheless, only a few more than 1000 voters turned out. The proposal was defeated.

Historically, it is a fact that those voters who are against something will come out in numbers while those voters who are for or who are indifferent stay home.

Referendum or initiative elections in Canyon are vehicles for the "aginners" to get what they want — whether the aginners are a majority of the electorate or not.

Commissioners know well that if they call for a special election to decide whether to build a city hall complex the aginners will be in force while the voters who favor construction will stay at home.

A vote on the project will lead to certain doom for a new city hall complex.

I believe as do the commissioners that they have no real choice but to allow the vote. But, I believe as do commissioners that it will be a travesty of the American system of things for a minority of voters to get what they want without the majority moving its lethargic head.

They problem commissioners must face, then, is how to get those voters who are for the complex out to the polls.

Commissioners believe they were elected by the people to make decisions as the people's representatives. I believe they will be willing to forego that point and make a goodwill gesture by calling the special election.

If they do, their idea of a progressive community spirit will go down the drain, unless the voters in Canyon show a little more interest in their city government than they have in the past.

For Canyon voters, the initiative petition and its call for a special election pose more than a surface issue.

The petitioners on the complex

Elders Ape Streakers?

Dear Editor:

"Streaking" seems to be the latest craze.

Lately, everywhere you go, from the supermarket to the college campus, "streakers" whiz by, sporting little else but sun glasses and tennis shoes, or ski masks and wide-brimmed hats.

No one could accuse the streakers of being fashion conscious, by any means. However, I suspect it isn't what the streakers are wearing that draws the attention of the crowds.

As a parent though, I figure it does have one redeeming feature. I won't have to worry about what the kids will wear to school tomorrow; laundry will become a thing of the past. All the kids will want to know is if their ski-mask is clean, or if the dung has been scraped off their cowboy boots. ("Goat-ropers" will naturally streak in cowboy boots.)

But I do worry about the effect streaking will have on the older generation.

Let's face it, Gramps isn't going to be able to do the mile in a minute and a half. Neither is Grandma, for that matter.

And what boss will take kindly to his employees streaking across the parking lot?

Another thing that concerns me about streaking is the welfare of the Vegas show girls? Will they be out of jobs, or will they have to start putting it all on now?

I've heard streaking compared to swallowing gold-fish, or doing the Big Apple, as the "kids" were doing a generation or two ago.

And I've been around long enough to see "Sis" don a mini-skirt, and "Momma" go her one better, with an even shorter skirt. I've watched "Junior" let his hair grow down to his shoulders, only to see "Dad" with his hair just as long and a mustache to boot!

It seems to me that "streaking" is a "horse of a different color."

Is it possible the kids have finally come up with something their parents can't ape?

Could be, but this writer doubts it.

Sincerely,
Teena Grimm

Buff Spring Drills Begin Friday

West Texas State University's Buffaloes, still smarting from a disappointing 1973 season, open football spring drills Friday.

The Buffaloes suffered through a 2-9 season last fall, but that team was made up of many sophomores who are now stronger and have gained more maturity.

As West Texas State has 30 school days to get in 20 practice sessions of spring drills, the practice schedule will be kept flexible. The Buffaloes will work out from Friday until the school takes its spring break April 6.

The spring break will not be over until April 16 and at that time the Buffalo coaching staff will continue the drills until the allotted 20 dates are completed. The final date for the spring game has not been set.

The regular Buffalo coaching staff will be joined by John LaGrone, one of the better players to come out of Panhandle high school football.

LaGrone was an all-state defender for coach Gene Mayfield's 1962 Borger High School team which reached the state finals. He earned All-American honors at SMU in 1966 before signing to play in the Canadian Football League.

In seven years as a member of the Edmonton team, LaGrone has been named All-League six times as a defensive tackle. LaGrone will work with the squad until the spring break.

The Buffalo squad was strengthened at the semester by the addition of seven junior college players. Quarterback Mike Bettez, 6-1, 190-pounder, transferred to West Texas from Southwest Junior College in Chula Vista, Calif. He will join veterans Mike Wartes, Don Nava and Bob Sweat in a battle for that position.

Ricky Rice, a junior college All-American running back, transferred from Golden West Junior College in Huntington Beach, Calif. He will compete with such veterans as Jimmy Lisle, Rick Schleider and John Paul Lee for playing time at halfback.

Michael Kelson, a secondary player from Phoenix, Ariz., Junior College, will contend for playing time with such veterans as Robert Edwards, Arcadio Rivera, Juan Garza, Bryan Carr, Rick Mordecia and Scott Hindman.

John Dyslin is a 6-2, 225-pound linebacker from Santa Anna, Calif., Junior College. He will face competition from veterans David Herber, Bruce Davis, Steve Rogers and Mike Podzemny.

Bob Hamilton, Bob Johnson and Floyd Jones are junior college transfers at defensive line positions. Hamilton is a 6-1, 215-pounder from Cerritos Junior College in Norwalk, Calif. Johnson, 6-3 and 225, transferred from Lakewood Junior College in White Bear Lake, Minn., and Jones, 6-1 and 265, transferred from Ranger, Tex., Junior College.

The Buffaloes open their 1974 season on the road Sept. 14 against Drake in a Missouri Valley Conference contest. They return home for their opener in Canyon against MVC rival New Mexico State Sept. 21.

Other home games are Sept. 28 against Wichita State in a conference contest, Oct. 5 against Southern Mississippi in a non-conference game, Nov. 2 against Lamar University in another non-league game and Nov. 16 against MVC foe North Texas State.

The first three Buffalo home games start at 7:30 p.m., but the final two have 1:30 p.m. starting times.

Other road games are Oct. 12 at Idaho, Oct. 19 at Tulsa, Oct. 26 at Lamar, Nov. 9 at Tampa and Nov. 30 against Louisville. The games against Tulsa and Louisville are MVC contests, while the remaining games are non-conference.

Fourteen miles of Randall County roads will be renovated due to approval given last week by the Texas Highway Commission to seal coat work for the Panhandle area.

The work is to repair winter damage.

In Randall County, the work involves Farm Road 285 from U.S. 87 to the Armstrong County line.

Ekker Puts Together Wants-To-Win Squad

When Ron Ekker moved to West Texas State University late last spring from Hillsdale, Mich., he hit the ground running fast, talking fast and working 20 hours each day.

The man with a history of making winners out of losers was faced with a rugged task and he accepted the job.

The Buffaloes had won only nine games prior to Ekker's arrival at West Texas State and had finished dead last in the Missouri Valley Conference with a 2-12 record.

Ekker and his equally hard working assistant coaches — J.D. Barnett and Rick Starzcki — did bush shaking in all parts of the nation in order to bring in basketball players with Missouri Valley Conference ability.

Prior to the 1973-74 season a poll of Missouri Valley Conference coaches and news media men placed the Buffaloes just where they had finished the year before — dead last.

Playing with only one returning starter, a group of talented junior college transfers and solid freshmen, the Buffaloes made the odds makers take a look at their hole cards.

Using a solid defense and good percentage shooting, the Buffaloes won five MVC games and advanced into sixth place in the nine-team league. Overall, the Buffaloes won 11 games and lost 15.

In their final three Missouri Valley Conference games at home, the Buffaloes shot over 60 per cent of their field goal attempts true. They hit 65 per cent of their shots in beating New Mexico State, 69-63; 60 per cent in defeating Wichita State, 85-73; and 61 per cent in losing to Tulsa, 72-66.

The Buffaloes shot a steady 45.1 per cent of their field goal efforts and 74.7 per cent of their free throwing attempts in Missouri Valley Conference games.

For the season, West Texas hit 44.7 per cent of its field goal efforts.

The aggressive West Texas defense held its opponents to a 43.5 shooting percentage for the season.

Leading the Buffalo attack for the year was 6-8 sophomore, Reginald Ramey, the only returning starter from the year before. The big fellow from Philadelphia averaged 17.5 points per game and pulled in 8.7 rebounds.

Howard Taylor, one of four junior college transfers who started most of the season, followed Ramey in scoring with a 15.8 season average. The 6-2 guard from Como, Miss., also averaged three rebounds per game.

Joe Cooney, 6-4 guard from Detroit, Mich., tallied 12.8 points per game and was second on the team in rebounding with a 7.6

average. Dallas Smith, 6-8 sophomore from Des Moines, Iowa, scored 8.1 points per game and had a 7.2 rebound mark.

Forward Dana Albright, who was in the starting lineup most of the year, scored 3.5 points per game and pulled in 3.4 rebounds.

Hector Rodriguez, the only senior among the squad's top 11 scorers, tallied 2.9 points per game and had a 2.3 rebound average.

Ramey and Cooney were both named to the Missouri Valley Conference All-Star squad on the second team. Ramey was the leading vote-getter on the second team. He received more votes than any other sophomore.

Ekker pushed his overall coaching record to 115 wins and 71 losses during the year. He has also produced winning teams at Winona, Minn., State and Hillsdale, Mich., College.

West Texas State faces Wichita State and Oral Roberts University meets Central State College in 9 a.m. matches at the West Texas State courts.

Texas Tech meets Southwestern Louisiana at the Amarillo Tennis Center at 9 a.m. and Amarillo College faces Oklahoma State at 9 a.m. on the Memorial Park Courts.

West Texas is a solid favorite to advance into the 5 p.m. semi-final match in the Activities Center against the ORU-Central State winner. Oral Roberts is paced by Mladen Tomic of Yugoslavia and George Okalidis from Greece. Central State is the defending national junior college champion.

Oklahoma State will have the class individual player on the tournament in Mike Collins from London, England. The Aggie number two man is Harry Drummond from Ireland.

Texas Tech has a balanced team, as does Southwestern Louisiana. The Southwestern team is coached by former Amarillo College and West Texas State standout player Jerry Simmons.

The bottom bracket semi-final match, between the winners of the AC and OSU match and the Tech-Southwestern battle is slated for 2 p.m. at the Amarillo Tennis Center Friday.

The championship match is slated for 9 a.m. Saturday on the West Texas State Courts. The consolation bracket final is slated for 9 a.m. Saturday at the Amarillo Tennis Center.

Bill Marsh, senior from Arkansas City, Kan., is the number one Buffalo player. Wichita Falls senior Dale Corbin plays number two and Snyder senior John

Baylor Parents To Meet Monday

The Panhandle area chapter of the Baylor Parents League will host their spring meeting in Canyon Monday evening.

Larry Smith, coordinator of admissions counselling, will be speaker for the event, which begins at 7:30 p.m. at the community center.

WT Foreign Visitor Program Eyed

Two representatives of two federal government foreign development programs will be at West Texas State University Wednesday and Thursday to conduct an information conference regarding the possibility of having foreign visitor study programs at WT.

Will Farmer of the foreign development division of the United States Department of Agriculture and Ralph Jones of the Agency for International Development will be in room 116A, University Complex

Phillips is the number three player. Steve Johnson, freshman from Reno, Nev., is the number four singles player and teams with Marsh to play number one doubles.

Houston freshman Brett Hall is the number five player and San Angelo freshman Jay Goss plays number six.

The Buffaloes are 5-2 for the season and fresh from a tremendous victory over the University of Oklahoma Saturday in Lubbock. The Buffs edged the defending Big Eight champions, 5-4.

Five of the matches during the two-day tournament, including all of the top bracket winners division events and the championship match, will be played in Canyon. The other seven matches will be played in Amarillo at either the Amarillo Tennis Center or the Memorial Park Courts.

South, at 10 a.m. on Thursday to confer with anyone wishing further information about their visit.

Their purpose in visiting WTSU is to inquire about foreign development programs that might be initiated at WT.

Such programs would involve bringing people from other countries who wish help in specific areas such as agriculture, business and engineering and could come to an American university for long- or short-term studies in their chosen field.

Digging Up Roots To Follow The Planting Season A Way Of Life For Migrant Worker

By ANN MELIN

Whether you think of her as "caught in the middle" or "enjoying the best of both worlds," West Texas State University senior Rosemary Salazar has occupied a position in life that offers an unusual perspective into what she calls "Chicano-Anglo" relations.

Miss Salazar, an attractive medical technology major at WTSU, is the daughter of a Texas field labor contractor. In the agricultural world, Miss Salazar's father is the middleman between the "Anglo farmer" seeking to harvest a crop, and the Mexican-American migrant worker seeking seasonal employment in the farmer's fields, she says.

Although her father's position on the agricultural totem pole offered her a more affluent life style than the field laborer, Miss Salazar says her family followed the same migratory pattern of existence as "los trabajadores" (the workers).

"We don't call ourselves migrants, anymore than people in the Armed Forces call themselves migrants because their jobs happen take them all over the country," Miss Salazar says.

She says that her father reached the eighth grade before he quit school and traversed the continent as a field laborer, working all up and down the Eastern Seaboard, the Southern United States and the Midwest. Eventually, she says, her father worked his way up to his present position of agricultural "middleman."

A victim of polio, Miss Salazar wasn't required to work in the fields like her brothers were during the summer. Because her father was imbued more than most with the "work ethic" that Americans claim is peculiarly their own, the other Salazar children went out into the fields each summer to work side by side with children who were there out of brute necessity, Miss Salazar says.

Half of the money my brothers made went into the family savings; the other half was their own to spend as they pleased. My father thought this was the way to teach his children responsibility," Miss Salazar said.

While Miss Salazar didn't experience the hand-to-mouth existence of the Chicano farm laborer, she says the migratory pattern in itself brings hardships often not often realized by those of more sedentary persuasion.

During her high school years, Miss Salazar divided her time between two schools and transferred to a third one for her senior year. In September, she entered Hereford High School, leaving in December. Shortly after New Year's, she'd then enroll in Edinburg High School, just in time to take finals over different material, different books than she had covered at the school she left. She attended Uvalde High School during her senior year.

Miss Salazar says she made "A's" at Edinburg High School, "B's" at Hereford High School. A good deal of the credit for her uncommonly excellent academic performance under what must have been uncommonly hard conditions, she gives to her father.

"He believed in education. He was very strict. Everywhere we moved, he always put us in school right away. In fact, we'd always try to leave on a Friday so we'd be in our new school by Monday," Miss Salazar added that it was and still is a very common thing for migrant workers not to be so concerned about their children's education. In varying degrees, children of many laborers miss days, weeks, even months of school. The seasonal and not the academic year determines their coming-and-goings, she says.

"It becomes a vicious cycle. The children miss so much school that they can't make passing grades. Maybe their parents want them to get an education, but you can't eat books. After a child reaches the age of eleven, he becomes a potential worker. He can help the family by working in the fields. If he works, he misses maybe five months of school. When he gets back to school, he's so behind he can't pass. Finally he gets frustrated and drops out. Now all he knows how to do is pick crops. He gets of support for the highway system.

Ed Timmons of the Texas Highway Department's Amarillo office said Tuesday's session will be an informal meeting to discuss the possibility of a major highway route from Amarillo to Las Cruces.

The route, which might or might not, go directly through Canyon, is one of 10 routes nationwide for which Congress directed feasibility and necessity studies as part of the 1973 Federal Aid Highway Act.

THD officials are already gathering information in their study of what should or should not be done with U.S. 60 to Las Cruces.

Their studies will determine whether it will be recommended to the Secretary of Transportation that the highway be made either a part of the federal interstate system or whether the highway should be left as a state highway.

The public hearing Tuesday will not be to determine specifically whether the highway should be an interstate. It will only be one of several methods the THD will use to determine public interest in the impact improvement to the highway would have on the area's economy.

The meeting will be the second in a month to be attended by local officials. Officials met in Roswell last month to discuss the progress of studies on the highway.

Timmons said the Tuesday meeting "will provide citizens with the opportunity to discuss and make recommendations regarding the feasibility, necessity and possible routing of a route extending from Amarillo to Las Cruces."

Local officials have voiced continuous support of the idea that U.S. 60 be designated a part of the federal interstate system. They have met with officials from other Texas cities and New Mexico cities several times in the last year to make plans for support of such a designation.

Phil Wilson, engineer director of the highway department's planning and research division in Austin, stressed that the meeting scheduled Tuesday will be an important part of the planning phase of the program.

"This study could be most important to the future transportation network of the Panhandle," Wilson said. "All interested persons should make every effort to attend and participate."

THD officials are to complete their study and forward their recommendations to New Mexico highway officials well before Jan. 1, 1975 for forwarding to the Secretary of Transportation for consideration.

married, has kids, and the whole cycle begins again."

Miss Salazar said the recent television drama, "The Migrants," was a fairly accurate account of the lifestyle of the farm laborer, but to the seemingly insuperable problems encountered by the fictional white family must be added the racial problem when one is talking of the Mexican-American worker, she says.

But the migratory lifestyle has its bright points, Miss Salazar is quick to point out. "You get to meet other people, see other places. It isn't boring."

"And my father realized it was hard for us to leave our friends, our schools. We'd cry when we were getting ready to leave and he'd try to cheer us up by making the trip fun for us."

"For instance, we'd always leave bright and early on a Friday to go from Hereford to Edinburg. As a little girl, my father would let me sit on his lap, behind the wheel, so that I could pretend like I was driving. If there was a parade or a carnival along the way, he'd stop and let us go to it. Sometimes he'd just stop at a park so we could swing for a while. And the biggest part of the trip was when we got to San Antonio. Maybe we'd get to go shopping in the big stores there, or go sightseeing. We always looked forward to San Antonio."

Miss Salazar remembers one year when it was particularly hard to pull up roots and follow the planting season.

"I was a junior at Hereford High School, all caught up with school spirit, junior proms, homecoming, that sort of thing. I cried when I had to leave. I'd been there the year was over, I'd been to the homecoming games of three different high schools."

Miss Salazar says there's a lot of misconceptions among people regarding the Mexican-American field laborer.

"A lot of people are inclined to associate 'migrants' with low, animal-like people. Primitive people. It's not so. Many workers are highly intelligent people faced with basic problems. There's weather conditions — fear of drought — or working conditions — like not having enough people to harvest a big crop. Or health conditions — not having insurance to pay for medical care."

The income derived from farm labor varies greatly. Some families make what technically could be described as a "good income," Miss Salazar cited the example of one family consisting of a father and eight strong sons, each a skilled farm worker. During the harvest season, the family's total income was $400 a week. But a sizeable chunk of the income from the months of June to October went to pay for the bills accumulated during the winter and spring months when the family was laid off, Miss Salazar said.

Despite the vicissitudes of migrant worker life in America, the prospects for such an existence attract thousands of Mexicans to this country every year. Legally or illegally they pour across the border. Why do they do it?

"They can make more money doing it here than they can in Mexico," says Miss Salazar. "There's a promise of a better life, more opportunities. And the government here aids workers more than it does in Mexico."

Seeking a cultural identity seems to pose special problems for Miss Salazar.

The pretty WTSU senior says she considers herself "a Mexican." Her mother is a Mexican citizen living legally in America as the wife of a naturalized American citizen. Her mother doesn't like some aspects of American culture, like its food, which she distastefully calls "el comido de los Gringos." Her mother's parents live in Mexico, as well as her father's parents.

"I like Spanish music. I like the mariachi bands. I identify with Mexicans. But I realize when you live in a society, like American society, you can't be separate from it. You want to hold onto one culture without having to live outside of the other one."

Every year Miss Salazar goes to visit her relatives and friends in Mexico, where she often gets jibes about her "Americanizing" of the Spanish language. Mexican friends laugh because when they drive into a parking lot, Miss Salazar says they're "parkiendo" (parking) the car, instead of "estacionando" (parking) the car.

When she goes into the marketplace, she runs the same risk as any American tourist of being tricked out of a couple of pesos, she says. Her "Mextex" can betray her American origins though she says she tries to be careful to keep it out of evidence.

And when she's talking to her Mexican grandfather, he often tells her about the history of her own native land, America.

"He knows all about it. The Civil War. The American Revolution. He knows of American figures I've never heard of, and when I tell him I haven't heard of them, he asks me what I'm learning in history class and how can I call myself an American citizen and not know about these things."

Discrimination, Miss Salazar says, is a funny thing. There're people in Mexico who dis-at the end of May.

Mrs. Strain has pursued a path by letter with federal officials in Texas with the Equal Employment Opportunity Office in San Antonio.

Bill Gonzales, director of the San Antonio office, refused Friday to give any information to The News concerning the status of Mrs. Strain's request for an opinion on the legality of the TMRS system.

In fact, he refused even to acknowledge the San Antonio office has corresponded with Mrs. Strain concerning her complaint.

"We are prohibited from disclosing any information at all except to the parties involved in this case," he said. "I wouldn't even confirm or deny we have such a case on Mrs. Strain."

Gonzales advised that Mrs. Strain "should write her congressman or senator or someone" for airing of her complaint.

Mrs. Strain says she was told by a San Antonio office official several months ago to contact a Mrs. Evangeline Swift in the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission office in Washington, D.C.

Six months ago, Mrs. Strain wrote a letter to Mrs. Swift, seeking advice on how to pursue her complaint against the TMRS. Mrs. Swift never answered the letter. A month ago, Mrs. Strain sent a carbon copy of the letter again to Mrs. Swift. Still no word.

City Manager Louder discussed Mrs. Strain's problems a year ago with Luther Holcomb, vice chairman of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission in Washington. Holcomb promised to refer the question of the TMRS legality to that commission's legal office for an opinion.

Louder has received several letters from Holcomb since that time, but none has contained an answer for Mrs. Strain.

Holcomb, confronted Friday with the fact that Mrs. Swift had yet to respond to Mrs. Strain's letters, vowed again to seek action on the complaint.

Mrs. Strain said Friday she's ready to try just about any method before her retirement to determine the legality of the TMRS system.

criminate against her because she's not a Mexican. There're folks in America who discriminate against her because they think she is a Mexican, she says.

At WTSU, she says, there are Chicanos who discriminate against Chicanos. Often this discrimination arises if a Chicano is considered by his fellow Chicanos to be too thick with "the Anglos." Oftentimes, a Mexican-American student from a small community may be having his first contacts with other Mexican-Americans when he comes to WTSU. For such a student, the decision of whether to "run around with the Anglos like he always has," whether to join the close-knit group of Mexican-Americans on campus, or whether to straddle both worlds, becomes perhaps the most important decision he's made in his life.

"If he identifies himself with the Anglo, he risks scorn from the Chicano. If he identifies himself with the Chicano, he risks discrimination from the Anglos. So, what do you do?"

About all one can do, Miss Salazar says, is to "be himself." Acceptance of oneself, in Miss Salazar's scheme of things, leads to acceptance of others.

And if people accepted each other, it would take a lot of confusion out of "Chicano-Anglo" relations, as well as human relations in general, she says.

Houses Here In Sample On Employees

Households in the Canyon area, part of a nationwide sample of 50,000 households, will be visited by U.S. Bureau of the Census interviewers next week in the monthly survey on employment and unemployment.

In addition to the usual questions on current employment, the March survey will ask about work experience and income in 1973 of household members, their national origin or descent, and whether they have moved since April 1970 when the Federal census was taken.

The monthly employment survey is conducted by the Bureau for the U.S. Department of Labor. The survey provides a running gauge of conditions in the labor force, a key indicator of the economic health of the nation.

The January survey showed that unemployment had risen to 5.2 per cent of the work force. It was 4.8 per cent, after revision, in December. The number of persons out of work increased by almost 370,000 to a total of 4.7 million. Total employment has shown little change for the past three months, following substantial gains during most of 1973.

The survey selects households scientifically to represent a cross section of all U.S. households. All information they supply is held confidential by law and is used only to compile statistical totals.

No Meeting For County

Randall County commissioners will not meet Monday afternoon in regular session.

The meeting has been cancelled so several commissioners may attend an El Paso meeting of the West Texas County Judges and Commissioners Association.

Next meeting of the commissioners will be at 1 p.m. March 25.

Candidates State Platform At Meet

Three candidates for various offices at the local level made brief statements during a meeting Thursday night of the Canyon Political Action Group.

Mrs. C. S. Thompson, candidate for election to the city commission, Charles Sykes, also a candidate for the city commission, and E. T. Cummings, candidate for election to the board of the South Randall County Hospital District appeared before a small group.

Sykes said he would favor open sessions on all public business, and seeks more public involvement in city business. Mrs. Thompson spoke on the need for full support of West Texas State University and the need for an awareness on the part of the citizenry about the potential problems in future water supplies.

Cummings offered his experience as an accountant as candidate for the hospital board.

Mrs. Thompson faces incumbent Jim Christopher in the April 2 city election and Sykes faces incumbent H. R. Fulton Jr. Cummings runs with a slate of incumbents, Mrs. Nolon Henson, Floyd Tomlinson and Raymond Batenhorst for the hospital board.

Burglary Charge Filed On Man

A South Amarillo man was charged last week with burglary with intent to commit rape in connection with a break-in of an Amarillo resident.

Chester Burnam was arrested in the early morning hours Thursday by Amarillo police.

Dist. Atty. George Dowlen said Burnam's arrest was spurred after an Amarillo woman told them a man had broken into her house but had been frightened away and then had made an obscene phone call asking her to rendezvous with him at a Randall County location.

Club Elects Officers

Members of the Palo Duro Rusk Home Demonstration Club met recently in the home of Mrs. Charles Conatser. Ten members present answered roll with what happened the last time they tried to be plumbers.

New officers were elected. They are Mrs. A. R. Northcutt, president; Mrs. Debbie D. DeBord, vice-president; Mrs. Conatser, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. Clem Dugan, reporter; and Mrs. Bill West, council delegate. Mrs. West was also elected Woman of the Year.

The next meeting for the club is scheduled for March 25 with the program on "How to Fix A Leaky Faucet."

referred to Metro's past activities as amounting to the busting of "100 whores and two-bit crap games."

Dist. Atty. Tom Curis of Potter County and George Dowlen of Randall County agreed that in the past Metro has been involved in the prosecution of minor offenders rather than devoting full time to major criminal activity in the two-county area.

Under the new grant proposal which will be submitted for funding to the CJC, the head of the board that Dowlen be allowed to sit in on the meetings to act as legal counsel.

Funding under current appropriations for the unit runs out April 30.

Throughout its brief three-year history, the Metro Unit has become a controversial law enforcement arm in the two-county metropolitan area.

Several members of the squad have been charged with felony offenses themselves.

Bicentennial Group Discusses Plans

Exciting ideas were being tossed around by the newly formed Bicentennial Executive Committee for Randall County and Canyon in a meeting held last Friday afternoon.

A report was drawn up to send to the Panhandle Bicentennial Committee, naming Dr. Duane Guy as General Chairman. Heading the subcommittees are Dr. Fred Rathjen, Heritage Committee; Jane Stephens, Festival Committee; and Clair Kuehn, Horizons Committee. Mary Alice Hines was also elected as the Secretary for the Executive Committee and is to head the Public Relations Committee.

The committee will meet again on April 3 and will hopefully have some more definite plans made.

Commissioners plan to construct the Amarillo annex with federal revenue sharing funds they expect to receive during the next three years.

They will issue certificates of obligation to provide interim financing for the construction but no long-term debt service is anticipated or planned for, according to Pond.

A portion of the meeting will also be devoted to a work session on the proposed 1974-75 city budget.

Demos, GOP Meet Monday

The executive committees of Randall County's Democratic and Republican Parties will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday in separate rooms of the county courthouse.

The Democratic executive committee will meet in the county courtroom on the second floor of the courthouse.

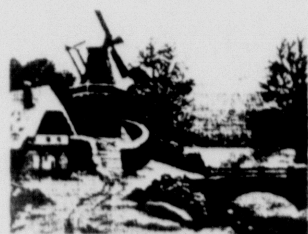

The Republican executive committee will meet in the commissioners courtroom on the second floor of the courthouse.

Both committees will address themselves to procedural elements of the May 2 primary elections and mechanics of precinct and county conventions.

Office Atmosphere Simulated In New WT Business Course

By SANDY GREINER

Innovative teaching methods in the Business Education Department at West Texas State University earmark the department as one of the school's finest, and the ideas continue to flow.

Dr. Roland Johnson, head of the department, told the Canyon News about a course in the planning stages that would provide a work experience atmosphere for the business students.

Being studied by the curriculum committee is an office administration course, called office simulation. The course would integrate previous skills, knowledge, attitudes, general education, and traits.

A company, American Paper Exporters Association, or APEX, would be formed as the simulation vehicle with 20 entry level and supervisory positions under a minimum of 10 job titles.

Dr. Johnson explains that the course would "run the full gamut of office activities" with action in each of the major domains of office activity, including operating, interacting, and managing. The activities would include creating, processing, verifying, storing, and disposing of data.

In the interacting domain, action would include communicating, assisting, and coping opportunities.

In the managing domain, activities would include planning, organizing, actuating, and controlling experiences, with a strong emphasis on decision making.

Dr. Johnson said a system of team teaching is planned for the course if it is accepted by the university. If it is approved, the course will probably be taught on an experimental basis next fall, with the actual course being offered in the fall of 1975.

Another proposed course is in the shorthand classwork. Dr. C.C. Callarman hopes to endocrinize into the curriculum, an individual rate laboratory system in which students can progress at their own rate of learning.

Gregg Publishers have established cassette tapes designed to teach procedure and presentation at an individual rate. The plan calls for a 32 person room, with two persons to each cassette. Thus 16 different rates of procedure could be used.

Dr. Callarman says the department needs $1200 to finance the course project, and is looking for ways to raise the money now. He contends that the individual rate system of teaching shorthand helps the student in a faster skill acquisition.

Grade improvement and the student incentive to do his best rather than just slide through the course is another advantage to the process.

Dr. Callarman is already using a similar procedure in his teaching, but the laboratory set up would be more beneficial.

He divides his classes up according to groups based on the progress of each student. A tape for each of the 70 assignments in the shorthand textbook is made and used in each group according to rate improvement.

The procedure allows Dr. Callarman to devote more specialized attention to the problems of each group.

At one time Dr. Callarman said he was using four different rooms for one class.

"I could walk down the hall and hear myself teaching four different classes at the same time. It was a little weird," said Dr. Callarman.

Dr. Callarman, who will retire after the 1974-75 term, hopes to see the new course in action before he leaves.

Dr. John Rider, who teaches methods for accounting and general business, uses a method to help the student see himself in a teaching situation.

By videotaping the students in a classroom situation, Dr. Rider says that he helps to build a positive self-concept in the student teacher.

With the use of the television studio in the basement of the University Complex South, Dr. Rider puts the student teacher in a "micro-class" situation with small groups of students.

"We use 15 minute lectures, since the attention span of a high school student is about that long," says Dr. Rider.

About a half hour is spent in reviewing the videotape to give the potential teacher an idea of how he looks in front of the classroom.

Dr. Rider contends that the tape viewing puts the students about three to four weeks ahead of student teachers who have not had the course instruction.

He finds that the taping points out the good and the bad.

"I take the role of the dumb Johnny in the classroom to give the student the actual feel of the teaching experience, especially if the other students in the classroom group are not interacting enough with the teacher," says

Dr. Rider.

"The role playing teaches the student teacher the ability to think on his feet, and I don't think we do enough of that anymore," explains the professor.

Recognizing the difficulty most have in viewing themselves, Dr. Rider does not grade the student on his first taping, but all others through the semester eight week course are graded.

"When I first subjected myself to such a taping and review, I made up my mind never to go back to the classroom," recalls Dr. Rider.

But the end results are worth any humiliation, according to Dr. Rider. The students seem to be at the peak of preparation and grooming for the taping. He also contends that many speech imperfections are recognized by the students and corrected.

Dr. Rider proposes that the type of videotaping the students go through might be a good way for professors to be evaluated.

"We should see how we look in our little kingdoms," said Dr. Rider.

A tape recorder has not been completely successful in the job, though it used to be a means before the videotaping sessions were tried.

Dr. Rider also says that the students' criticism of each other is not always successful, because he does not know if students are capable of constructive criticism.

"They give undo criticism on things that are often insignificant," explains Dr. Rider.

The taping sessions also teach the students to gain an ability to interact with the class and touch on some issues the lesson plan may not.

Carolyn Landram teaches an office practice class in which the girls on the one year secretarial course practice in five different work areas to acquaint themselves with all the different office machines and situations.

They work in rotation on the decimal tabulator, the executive typewriter with variable spacing, the executive, a machine transcribing teaching method, and the key punch. Then a group of girls work in a model office and they are given secretarial decision making duties.

"The office practice course is a sort of finishing course for the one year girls," said Ms. Landram.

No textbooks are used in the course, as all the problems are theoretically taken from the real business world.

A survey of business class taught by Virginia Cotton acquaints the students with all sides of the business world.

In the course, there is a strong emphasis on the current events and practical application of skills. The use of movies, current event discussion, outside speakers, field trips and projects including the making of a budget, writing checks and filling out applications compliment the course with a large practical experience.

The typing department of the business classes, under the partial direction of Marilyn Wiswall, has developed its own materials for practice and grading.

The use of the textbook is no longer as advantageous to the students as the development of the departmental work.

According to Ms. Wiswall, the typing classes emphasize the production of "mailable copy only."

"Anything that wouldn't pass in an office won't pass in our classes," says Ms. Wiswall.

The strength of the business department at the university is evident in the innovative teaching methods of the classes with professors constantly creating a new stream of ideas for more effective teaching.

Dr. John Rider of the Business Education department reviews a videotape with a student enrolled in a methods course. The student was videotaped while practicing teaching in a class situation set up by Dr. Rider. The practice is a relatively new idea to help the student teacher relax in the classroom.

Spelling Bee Is Wednesday

Nineteen elementary school and 10 junior high school spelling bees will vie for the county championship at 4 p.m. Wednesday when the Randall County Spelling Bee gets underway on the junior high campus.

Mrs. Chris Thomas, bee director, said savings bonds will be given to the winners of both the junior and senior spelling bee divisions.

Elementary school students — 7 from Gene Howe and 12 from Rex Reeves — will compete in the junior bee while 10 students from CJHS compete for the senior title. The winner of the junior bee may elect to join the senior bee for the county title.

Judges for the bee will be Mrs. Phil Swartzell, Mrs. George Blackwell and Mrs. Kenneth Olsen. Jim Couzzourt will be pronouncer for the bee, aided by Jan Cosmick.

The bee will be held at the CJHS auditorium with the junior spelldown preceding the senior contest.

Those competing for the junior title include Rex Reeves students Danny Green, Terry McKinney, Dale Hopper, Mona Crawford, Doug Davis, Ken Johnson, Debbie Oppie, Barbara Sommer, Susan Coleman, Amy Boston, Elaina Vise and David Harbin. Alternates are Gary Fletcher, Bruce Byrd, Gregg Goettsch and Todd Peppard.

Gene Howe students to compete in the junior bee include Terry Miller, Debra Drost, Kendall Young, Molly Dudenhoefter, Mike Martindale, Carla Schmidt, and Eddie Saver. Alternates include Teena Berry and Tammy Tucker.

Junior High students competing for the senior bee crown include Cheryl McNabb, Joe Marshall, Jane Lewis, Cherri Ham, Joel McKinney, Nancy Albers, Mike Grabber, Michael Arnet, Monte Crawford and Bill Ritchie.

Winner of the county senior bee will travel to Amarillo later this spring to compete for the regional bee crown.

All Around The House

Salads suit the lighthearted moods of Spring, the desire for casual foods. Take it easy on the heavier entrees and concentrate on salads.

Homemakers can always fortify a salad with cheese chunks, cubes or strips, or meat, chicken or fish to make a main dish out of it. If they're cooking casually out-of-doors, they can always prepare the salad in advance to be nibbled on while chicken, steak or burgers cook on the grill.

With this garden salad bowl, there's a medley of vegetables: cauliflower, carrots, green or wax beans that have been marinated in a zippy dressing redolent with cheese. The Cheddar and Parmesan cheeses not only add protein to the salad but also give it a distinctive piquant flavor.

This salad does not become limp or wilted since only cooked vegetables are used. They should be cooked only until just tender to be at their best. Serve Garden Bowl Salad with your favorite broiled meat, fish or chicken. Add relishes, French bread and tall glasses of chilled milk for a delightful menu.

Garden Salad Bowl

1 pound carrots, peeled and cut into 1 inch pieces

1 small head cauliflower, broken into flowerets

3/4 lb. green or wax beans OR 1 pkg. (9 oz.) frozen beans

1/4 cup salad oil

1/2 cup shredded Cheddar cheese

1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese

1/3 cup vinegar

3 tbs. sugar

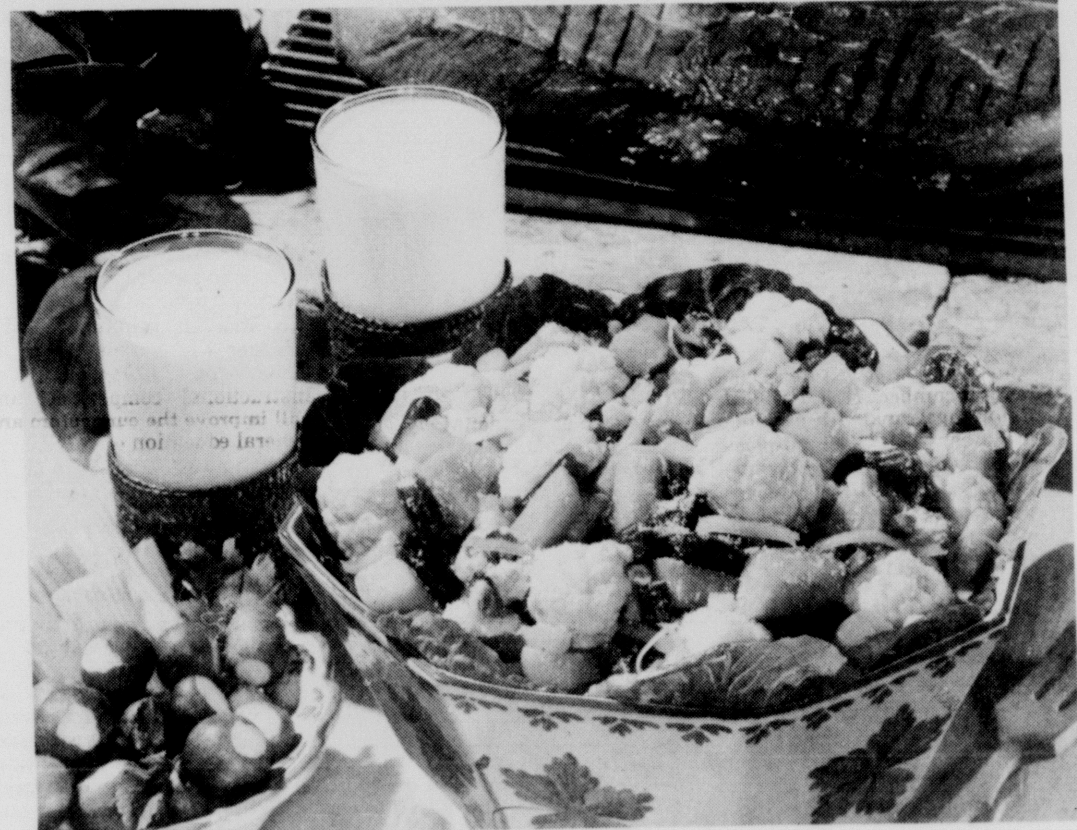

1/2 tsp. dry mustard

1/4 tsp. salt

1/4 tsp. basil

1/3 cup sliced green onions

Cook vegetables separately in boiling salted water just until tender; drain and cool. In a small bowl blend together salad oil, Cheddar cheese, Parmesan cheese, vinegar, sugar, mustard, salt and basil. In a large bowl combine cooked vegetables and onions; add cheese dressing and toss lightly. Cover and chill for several hours. Makes 8-10 servings.

Serve a salad that sings of Spring with its medley of cauliflower, carrots and green or wax beans. A duo of cheeses adds tang to the dressing.

We're Pierce National Life. An old-line legal reserve company that got started in 1929 and has been going and growing ever since. From coast to coast. Our home office is at 3807 Wilshire Boulevard in Los Angeles.

We're a big company. But that's not important. What is important is how we got that way. We did it through service. The kind of service your campus representative provides. And the kind of conscientious service that people in our home office have always provided.

And we did it by offering policy features that nobody else offered. Our College Insurance Program is full of them. That's why it's worth your knowing about. But first, we wanted you to know about us. Because we're behind it all.

Accrediting Team To Visit Campus

The National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education will be visiting the West Texas State University's College of Education March 18-20.

According to Dr. Jim L. Kidd, dean of the College of Education at WT, there will be an 11-member accreditation team from the council.

"The purpose of the visit," Dr. Kidd said "is for re-accreditation of the programs for teacher education at West Texas."

The College, according to the doctor, spent one year of self-study based on NCATE standards as preparation for the visit. The national document, which consists of these standards, specifies the certain qualities for accreditation in teacher education programs.

The visiting team, composed of people from all parts of the nation who work in college and public school teacher education programs, will be comparing WT's college-study with the NCATE standard document.

Afterwards, the team will provide a written report to the Breakfast Set Thur. For Chamber

The Canyon Chamber of Commerce will sponsor another quarterly membership breakfast at 6:30 a.m. Thursday in the community center.

Chamber President John Childs said the program during the breakfast will highlight the Canyon High School basketball teams, the Eagles, the Girl Eagles and their coaches.

Also scheduled for the breakfast will be the premier showing of a 14-minute recruiting film made for West Texas State University.

Directors of the chamber will cook the breakfast, which will be bacon, eggs, biscuits and the trimmings.

The breakfast is scheduled to end at 7:50 a.m. There is no charge for chamber members and their guests.

Sponsors of the breakfast will be The Furniture Galleries, Eddie Knowles New and Used Cars, Hosea Foster Insurance Agency.

A total of $40 in door prizes will be awarded.

Arts And Entertainment Thru The Looking Glass

GUEST COLUMN

By SANDY GREINER

"Honey, shine your light under here for us, we need to find this man's head."

Such a line is hardly the beginnings of a family television show, but it is prime time material for the local ten o'clock news.

Blood-and-guts is the name of the game in the television news business, the family show that comes into your living room each evening for all to see, hear, and absorb.

As a former member of a television news team, looking for the head of a suicide victim who had jumped in front of a moving freight train, was just one of the many gruesome experiences I had in taking the film to sell the station to the viewing audience.

Hard core news, "cold open material," was the news I had the most opportunity to cover being on the night beat.

Chasing ambulances becomes second nature to the team of news gatherers for all the three television stations in Amarillo.

The blood and gruesome detail brought into your living room each evening depends on the ability of the news reporter to get to the scene of the accident, shooting, fire, or explosion first.

Getting there first to catch every detail of the pain, and confusion is the main criteria for the sixty second film that flashes across your television screen bringing the reality of the world into your home, in living color, and more often than not, with the actual sounds of the agony and suffering.

Though most may find the idea repulsive, the average television news show is built around the hard core news, with the emphasis on the most devastating, and bloody event.

Most viewers, while disclaiming the idea and even the news show bringing them the actuality of the event, will turn on the television again to see a re-run of the pain and blood.

Ratings depend on the viewership, and if the station with the top show at 9 o'clock can keep the t.v. audience tuned in with blood and guts, the management will push it.

The average person has a sense of morbidity that supports the management theory through the most powerful means, the pocketbook. Strong viewership means strong sales, and strong viewership often depends on the power of the news to retain the audience.

Blood-and-guts will do it more often than not.

The Canyon High School Band will perform at the MENC Convention as a result of having submitted a tape recording of its UIL Contest performance from last spring to a national screening committee which selected groups for convention performance.

Other Texas groups to perform along with the CHS and WTSU ensembles include the Coronado High School Chorale, Lubbock, Kashmere High School Stage Band, Houston; Midwestern University Choir, Wichita Falls; Sam Houston State University Band, Huntsville; the Southern Methodist University Chamber Orchestra, and the University Brass Choir of North Texas State University, Denton.

Previous trips made by the CHS ensemble include the Six Flags Over Georgia Band Festival in 1972; the Texas Music Educators Association Class AAA Honor Band, 1970; Six Flags Over Texas, Buccaneer Music Festival and the Tri-State Music Festival.

The WTSU Chorale, which includes 55 voices, is performing before a distinguished audience for the second year in a row. Last February, the Directors Luncheon of the Texas Music Educators Association was the scene for an enthusiastically received program by the singers. "Outstanding" and "among the very best" were only a few of the comments.

WT Chorale, CHS Band California-Bound

"California, here I come!" is singing through the minds of each Canyon High School Band and West Texas State University Chorale member as they prepare for their upcoming trips to the Music Educators' National Convention in Anaheim, California.

The WTSU ensemble will present a pre-tour concert at 8 p.m. today in the Fine Arts Theatre, and again on Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Amarillo High School auditorium. The group under the direction of Dr. Hugh Sanders, will perform Saturday in the Anaheim Convention Center, California. They will then be used as the demonstration choir by Robert Page of Temple University at the American Choral Directors Symposium.

The Canyon High School Band under the direction of J. W. King will leave at 4 p.m. Thursday for Anaheim. The Canyon Band Parents and members of the band raised approximately half of the $11,000 required for the trip. The balance of the expenses will be paid by individual members.

The Band received its instruction.

Amarillo College was the first to have the West Texas sponsored military training. Instruction began there last fall. This spring semester Frank Phillips Junior College at Borger joined the list. The schools have eight and nine students enrolled in the courses, respectively.

Cogan will devote all of his time to traveling the three-school circuit beginning next fall.

Funeral services are slated at 2 p.m. Monday for Mrs. Winnie Arnie Bryan, 65, a resident of Happy since 1931 who died at 3:20 p.m. Friday at Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo.

Officiating at services will be the Rev. Travis LaDuke, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Jenks, Okla., and the Rev. Paul Heil, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Happy of which Mrs. Bryan had been a member. Burial will be in Dreamland Cemetery.

Born in Swisher County on Feb. 7, 1911, Mrs. Bryan married Lester Bryan May 14, 1931 in Clovis and the couple moved to Happy.

Survivors include her husband of the home; three daughters, Mrs. Steve McKee of Hereford, Mrs. Cecil Woods of Plainview and Mrs. James Bible of Wayside; one son, Dean, of Happy; two brothers, W. H. Pearson of Tulsa, and W. A. Pearson of Tulsa; one sister, Mrs. Ethel Clark Brannum of Amarillo; and 11 grandchildren.

Arrangements have been made by LaGrone Funeral Directors of Canyon.
